COMPANY. The meetings of the China and Japan Incorance Company were held at the offices of the Jompany in the Nanking Road, Shanghai, on the let inst. There were 35 shareholders present, including the Directors. Mr. Ringer was in the chair. The well-known object of the meeting being to take the opinion of the shareholders as to the advisability of winding up the Company, the proceedings were very interesting. The party for continuing the Company was led by Mr. Kinger, supported by the Directors and Mr. Wainewright the opposition being led by Mr. Groom, chiefly supported by Mr. Macgregor. All the Directors were present except Mr. A. J.

This was seconded, and a show of hands was taken. The SECRETARY having read the notice taken as indicating approximately the final calling the meeting.

Mr. GROOM proposed that Art. 7 of the Deed. of Settlement be annulled. The Article is that 'The Company shall continue for a period of ninety-nine years from the date of these presents." He greatly regretted that the business was falling off, as it undoubtedly was: and that the Directors were obliged to offer a dividend Kano will refuse to allow warlike counsels to further possible liabilities, and for payment of from the reserve fund. The Directors had themselves spoken against such a policy at a meeting in December, 1879, and yet now they proposed it themselves. There was no hope of an increase of business and so of dividends. The actual interest on their capital was less than the banks would have paid, and it was to be remembered that the risk of the capital in the Insurance Company, as compared with the bank, was far greater. There had been a steady falling off since 1872 in the premis contributed: e.g. in 1872, amount of premia was Tle, 277,000; in 1873, Tls. 188,000; in 1874, Tls. 158,000. The shareholders must notice a gradual docrease in their business. A typhoon at the present time might cause the absorption and loss of their entire present balance and reserve. The plea had been put forward that the position of the Company was owing to bad luck, but he didn't see it. Other Companies accept the same risks, at the same rates. The real falling off is because it is not a mutual Assurance Company. The shareholders and contributors bolding shares are opposed to each other. The shareholders had no interest except as to the amount of capital. He held a large number of proxies sent to him from different coast ports, with instructions that they were to be used for the express purpose of obtaining the liquidation of the Company. It had been asserted that this proposal had emanated from interested and speculative shareholders, who had lately taken up shares with this idea, but he assured the meeting it was not so; some of bis proxies belouged to original chareholders.

Mr. MACGREGOR seconded the proposal and observed that the shareholders were really the security for the contributors. He agreed that it was unwise to go to the reserve fund for the divitributed the business re-organise the Company. (Applause.)
